Movement is the doorway to well-being, and the very sign of life — yet it often takes a back seat in our daily lives.

In NCR, even the smallest act of movement requires effort, owing to traffic, heat, pollution, scarce green cover and poor walkability.

Yet, with longevity and wellness trends being embraced across the world, the desire to feel more energetic, active and connected has never been stronger.

RESEARCH SHOWS THAT OUR HABITS
ARE DIRECTLY INFLUENCED BY OUR IMMEDIATE SURROUNDINGS.

In Atomic Habits, author James Clear suggests that the environment is the invisible hand that shapes human behavior; designing your environment for success can bring about more favourable outcomes.

Clear, James. Atomic Habits: The life-changing million-habit philosophy. Random House, 2018.

Nudge theory, popularised by Richard Thaler and Cass Sunstein, proposes that subtle changes in 'choice architecture' can influence people to make better decisions without limiting their options or using force.

Thaler, Richard H., and Cass R. Sunstein. Nudge: Improving Decisions about Health, Wealth, and Happiness. Yale UP, 2008.

According to Danielle Roeske, PsyD, Vice President of Residential Services at Newport Healthcare, our outer worlds invariably affect our inner worlds, and vice versa.

"The Mental Health Benefits of a Green Home," Newport Healthcare, 26 Jan. 2022, www.newporthealthcare.com/resources/danielle-roeske-psyd/.
